FARMERS FIGHT RECIPROCITY

SHARP ONSLAUGHT ON THE BILL BEFORE SENATE COMMITTEE.

Senator Hale Admits That It Seems Useless to Fight the President Brings Out That Members of Congress Were Consulted in Preparing It.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21. The situation as regards the Administration's reciprecity agreement remained practically unchanged to-day. The opponents of the measure are still making their plan to prevent it from coming to a vote in the Senate, but with probabiv a nittle less confidence as to the outcome than they had a few days ago. Two or three remarks made by Senator Hale at the Senate Finance Committee hearing to-day show that the opponents of the measure appreciate that they will have to shoulder a tremendous responsibility in killing the measure in the face of the President's in determined attitude.

Senator Hale is one of the most outspoken opponents of the reciprocity plan and his apparent lack of confidence was regarded to-day as significant. President Taft still has hopes of bringing the bill to a vote before March 4 and he will continue to exert himself along this line.

Voted "No" and the rest voted with qualifications.

The Ways and Means Committee of the amendment, although they were extremely reluctant to vote against it to-day, say nothing. This action is the collimation of the fight on the steel trust made for years by Representative Stanley of Kentucky.

This is only one of to-day's radical pack between the United States and Cannada," Mr. Gaines is one of the most.

For seven hours to-day the members of the Senate Finance Committee listened to protests against the proposed reciprocity with Canada. Most of the witnesses who appeared represented the farmer. All of them said that the adonfarmer. All of them said that the adop-

Senator Root of New York appeared before the committee and made a brief statement concerning the Mann amendment added to the McCall bill in the House. Senator Root pointed out that the McCaut bill embodied the features of the agree-ment between the United States and Canada, but that the bill in its present form with the Mann amendment added original form. In that form pulp wood and print paper would not go on the free list until the Canadian Provinces lift their present restrictions against the exportation of pulp wood cut from crown lands Representative Augustus P. Gardner was before the committee to protest against the reciprocal trade agreement in behalf of the Gloucester fishermen. Senator Hale took advantage of Representative Gardner's presence to bring out the fact that Senators and Bepre-sentatives had not been consulted by the executive department while the nethe executive department while the negotiations were under way. After establishing the fact that Representative Gardner was familiar with the needs of the New England fishermen and had always looked after their interests in matters of legislation Mr. Hale asked him if he had ever been consulted by those interested in the negotiations. Mr. Gardner replied that he had tried once to get some light from the State Department on the negotiations, but untaitisfactorily. Then he went to the White House and was told by the President that the case was closed.

The most interesting witness of the declaration of martial law which was day was Aaron Jones of South Bend, ind. who for eight years was master of the National Grange and who is now at the head of the Indiana Grange and chairman of the executive committee of the national organization. "I have not seen the people in the agricultural districts so thoroughly aroused since the day Fort Sumter was fired upon."

Mr. Jones brought with him about twenty representatives of farmers' associations. He had present to be heard in protest against the Canadian reciprocity twelve masters of State Granges. Among those heard in opposition to reciprocity were N. J. Batchelder, ex-Governor of New Hampshire and Master of National Grange. F. N. The dairy farmers, he said, felt that the Canadian agreement would be the death blow of the dairying interests in New York.

The witness continued to refer to the Canadian agreement as a treaty. Senator Cullom sought to correct him by suggesting that it was a bill, not a treaty.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21. - The Democrats of the House of Representatives to-day secured the adoption of an amendment to the naval appropriation bill which renders impossible the expenditure of a dollar of the many millions carried by that measure for the purchase of a pound of steel for use in battleship construction until the Attorney-General has decided whether the United States Steel Corpora tion is or is not a trust, a monopoly or a combination in restraint of trade.
